FLOWER SEEDS

Directions for Sowing, Etc.

To insure success, the conditions and requirements of the several species as to soil moisture, heat, light, etc., should be studied and then observed in culture. Below we give a few general directions for their culture.

The soil best adapted to most flowers is light, rich loam, containing enough sand to make it porous. If there is some clay with it, the color will be brighter. Make the surface as smooth and fine as possible, sow seed in rows, covering each sort of seed in proportion to its size (a good general rule being to cover twice the diameter of the seed) and press the soil down firmly over it. Do not plant seed when the ground is wet. Many varieties, such as Pansy, Verbena, Daisy, Hollyhock, and the fine greenhouse plant seeds, should be sown early in shallow boxes in the house, in soil consisting of equal parts of fine sand and rich mellow loam, well mixed together and sifted, to remove all gravel and lumps. Sow as before directed. Covering the box with glass helps retain the moisture and keeps the temperature even. Be careful not to keep them too wet, and as soon as they are large enough to handle, transplant in boxes from 1 to 2 inches apart, where they are to remain until time to transplant to permanent beds. We will always be glad to answer any question from our customers, relative to the cultivation of any kind of plants.
